Last edition by: WineCountryUA Wiki Link April 5, 2020 Quote: 1K® and Platinum members, we increase the upgrade capability by extending pluspoints expiration date by six months and extending Skip Waitlist.This means a six-month extension of any PlusPoints that expires January 31, 2021. 4 Dec 2019 (updated 29 Dec 2019) AU customer service agents can now extend 80 PlusPoints to 30 April 2020 to refrain 1Ks (GSs) on 31 January 2020. At this point, 80 PlusPoints don't have to come just from the GPU, it seems that there is no distinction between the original source of PlusPoints. This is not correct [anyone]: United MP agents are able to recognize whether PlusPoints come from GPUs or RPUs. Recently, during the call, only PlusPoints with GPU were able to be extended, up to a maximum of 80 PlusPoints until April 30, 2020. Some have been more successful in emailing United, as opposed to calling, although it seems that the PlusPoints extension from RPU is an exception rather than a rule. 29 Oct 2019 Quote: Originally Posted by chavala | Just received this email: Global Premier Upgrades (GPU) are valid until the end of the next premier year and the trip must be completed before the expiration date. And there is no guarantee that the policy will be renewed every year. It will update the title of the thread, if and when, it becomes a possible extension. When the AU decides to do so, it may take a week or two before most agents are aware. The extension can be done via email or phone - also by MPSC or telephone agents (some telephone agents will need help). No RPU extensions have been offered in the past. It's about spending on the people who spend are already up front for the most part I think. With an emphasis on segments rather than miles. PQS have historically been domestic travelers and RPU has historically not extended. I have one GPU that I'm still waiting for to use, nine for 2019. Fingers crossed for my November flight as the last international flight before it expires. Think for a few years these have always expired as I had no idea what they are! On upfront comments, it is likely that AU management is so focused on short-term metrics they don't really care about the long-term consequences. I recently read algorithmic leader Mike Walsh's book, which begins with a story about how big data/analitics/algorithms can go awry if not understood or misused, citing United leadership failures leading up to and during the infamous Dr. Dao incident. When I see posts/comments like We disagree (with all the frers' arguments that this is a bad change) and a little coffee, we'll be through it together with corporate advocates authorized to discuss publicly on a forum like this, it makes me think it won't be that long until United provides new material for another book about the bad leadership resulting from ignoring the data. Personally, I don't think they're exactly considering the differences between OPM vs. personal spending in their modeling consumer purchasing behavior. As it's have noted, it won't hurt the world come the next recession - but when that happens, I think the leadership team will have some coffee and go through it together. Doing just that can cost them a lot, under certain macroeconomic conditions. *For those who oppose vulgar language, piss does not fall into this category. Shakespeare used it!
